Centennial Celebration of the Supreme Court Organization.

New York, Feb. 4 .- The sad events of the last few days at Washington dimmed considerably the celebration of the centennial of the Federal Judiciary, inaugurated this morning. The weather, too, was very unfavorable, a heavy rain falling.

The attendance at the exercises in the Metropolitan Opera House was the most noted that ever filled that magnificent building. Distributed about the galleries were banners and shields bearing the coats-of-arms of the various States, and the interior of the building was otherwise e.aborately decorated.

On the right of the stage, in the front row, were seated the members of the United States Supreme Court.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland presided, and the others seated on the stage included ex-Justice William Strong, Senator Evarts, T. J. Semmes of New Orleans, General W. T. Sherman, Chauncey M. Depew and Davids Dudley Field.

While the distinguished gathering was filling the seats, until there was standing room only, the Grand Symphony Orchestra played the "Coronation March," the overture "Zampa" and the "American Fantasie."

When the last air was played ex-President Cleveland stepped forward. He was cheered to the echo, and it me minutes before he could speak. Bowing his acknowledgments and expressing his appreciation of the generous welcome accorded him, Mr. Cleveland began his address. Among other things he said:

supplied by the concessions of the tion of pure and disinterested patriotism. If from these elements there It is expected that the Equitable will our Federal system which is our theme to-day, the structure might have been fair to look upon and might have presented the semblance of solidity and strength; but it would have been only a semblance, and the completed edifice would have had within its foundations the infirmity of decay and ruin."

Following is a synopsis of Judge

"In every age and with every people there have been celebrations for triumphs in war, for battles won on land and sea and for triumphs of peace, but never until now has there been in any country a celebration like this-to commemorate the establishment of a judicial tribunal as a coordinate and permanent branch of its government. This celebration had its inspiration in a profound reverence for the constitution of the United States as the sure and only means of preserving the Union; with its inestimable blessings, and the conviction that this tribunal has materially contributed to its just appreciation and to a ready obedience to fts authority. Experience has shown that in a country of great territorial extent and varied interests, peace and lasting prosperity can exist with civilized people only when local affairs are controlled by local authorities, and at the same time there are lodged in the general government of a country such sovereign powers as will enable it to regulate the intercourse of its people with foreign na tions, and between communities; protect them in all their rights in such intercourse, defend the country against invasion and domestic violence, and naintain the supremacy of the laws throughout its whole domain. I an-swer, as a matter of the first consideration, that it should not be overborne with work, and by that I mean that it should have some relief from the immense burden now cast upon it. This can only be done by leg slative action, and in determining what measure shall be adopted for that purpose Congress will undoubtedly receive with favor suggestions from the bar associations of the country. In view of the condition of the court, its crowded docket, a multitude of questions con stantly brought before it of the greatest and most extended influence, surely it has the right to call upon the country to give it assistance and relief. Something must be done in that direction and should be done speedily to prevent delays to litigants now existing. To delay justice is as pernicious as to deny it. One of the most precious articles of the magna charta was that in which the King declared that he would not deny or delay to any man justice or right; and assuredly what the barons of England wrung from their monarch the people of the United States will not refuse to

Secretary Tracy's Condition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. - Secretary Tracy continues improving slowly. Many prominent people called during the morning and were informed that the Secretary was doing nicely. His son, Frank B. Tracy, arrived this morning on a special train. He was the first member of the family the Secretary had seen since the awful calanity, and his presence was an unmistakable source of joy and hope to the bereaved parent. The President sent over early in the morning to inquire after the Secretary, and private secretary Halford called in person about 10 o'clock to consuit with regard to the Swede, employed as a waiter in the Secretary's removal to the White House.

Secretary Tracy displayed wonderful recuperative powers this morning. At 11 o'clock he surprised his physicians by getting out of bed and dressing himself. try. Positive opinions cannot be until it is accurately determined pute as to the facts. All the howl is over the rule that a member who is on the floor of the House when a motion is put, is to be regarded as being there and not somewhere else There does not appear to be anything in that that goes to the bottom of human rights. Plainly, if the man is in the House no harm can be done if the fact is so recorded. We do not think that our liberties can be said to be at stake because a representative is not permitted the use of a wishing cap by which st will he becomes invisible to the Speaker. It does not seem that there is anything in this to stir up men's souls. A popular movement in support of the inalienable right not to be seen by the Speaker when one does not want it would have a rather comical aspect. The way in which that alleged right is sought to be illustrated by our Democratic friends reduces the House to the condition of the pea in the hands of the thimble-rigger —"now you see it, and now you don't."

When the Democrats, though present, don't want to vote, the House disappears, and nothing can be done. But when something comes up which the Democrats desire to vote on, then the House, in a most remarkable manner, blooms out in its pristine vigor, though during all this time not a member has left his seat. It may be true that this sort of thing has been going on for a long time. But it could not do a great deal of harm, unless when parties in the House are so nearly equally divided as at present. It is child's play for all that. It is nonsense to suppose that a pretended privilege of the member to put an extinguisher on himself, so that the Speaker cannot see him, is to be upheld at the expense of the transaction of the public business.

A St. Louis clergyman of brilliant attainments has created some excitement in religious circles by a vigorous denunciation of creeds. His congregation stands by his hetrodexy, and the church proper gives him opportunity to withdraw from communion with it. Whereat the local press treats the matter as one of surprising, not to say startling, interest. But there is nothing new in this secession. Men have been breaking away from orthodoxy day after day for years. There is simple justice in the church suggesting the retiracy of one who disbelieves its doctrines. The Record-Union says that it is inthinkable that any one should wish to remain in communion with a body he believes to be in error. There is no martyrdom in the case. The church is right in demanding the withdrawa of a nonbeliever; the non-believer is wrong who denounces the church and then complains of being cut off.
If he disbelieves it is his duty to retire, for the truth does not demand that he shall remain under a creed to which he cannot subscribe. Freedom of conscience and speech justifies his right to declare his non-belief, but it does not crown him with the martyr's wreath because the church he de-nounces refuses to fellow him. We fail to see, therefore, why the St. Louis clergyman is entitled to any more sympathy than the man who ches what he believes to be truth and has not been related to s shurch. The truth stands inde-pendently always. It needs no props, and demands nothing except what by its own vigor and force it proves to be its deserts.

For political offenses there should be no extradition; for all felonies the criminal should be re-turned to the jurisdiction from which he escapes. On that basis it is difficult to understand why there should be any objection to the proposed new extradition

THE Salt Lake Tribune has the following to sav of Senator Ingalls' recent speech in the United States Senat: The full speech of Senator Ingalls, delivered a week ago, will go into history as one of the classics of this generation. It was not like his ordinary speeches. It had all Ingalls' fire, but the fire this time was under a control of calm that made its fierce heat all the more terrible. The faculty of using the exact words that give the ulmost expression to a thought is one that Senator Ingalls possesses in greater development than any man on earth that we know of. Then he can pierce a thought with Democratic minority in the House an epigram, or work an idea of Representatives It proclaims through intellectual fireworks up that it is suffering from the strong to a mighty explosion as a climax hand of ruthless Republican power.

It is not relieved, it professes to believe that no end of injury is flying artillery, an infantry charge or a rush of cavalry, but they do know it will mean war in its most formed on this political hysteria pronounced form. This last speech of his is his masterpiece, and men what right of the minority has who hate Senator Ingalls will read been suppressed. The Bulletin the speech admiringly, so magn fi-

This book contains 480 pages; is eight and one-half inches long, six inches wide and two inches thick. It is printed on extra heavy paper and is handsomely bound, with embossed cover and gilt-lettered back. It is different trom-all other works ever published. First - It teaches those who have it how to tell what the matter is when a person gets sick.

All similar books tell what to do if you know what the disease is. This book tells you HOW TO DETECT THE DISEASE, and then what to do for it.

No other Book Published

Second-When a person is really attacked by a dangerous disease, it enables you to know the fact, and in such cases its advice is: "Send for a competent phy-sician at once." But in all ordinary cases, such as can be easily cured, it gives full directions for treatment.

Third-It is not confined to the practice used by any one class of physicians; but it gives, separately, and for each disease, the methods used by each of the different schools of medicine, and fin ALL CASES the PRE-SCRIPTIONS ARE MADE by the MOST EMINENT MEN id their respective modes of practice. This makes the work specially suited to the needs of every family, no matter what med-

There are three chapters in the "Family Physician" which are worthy of special mention, namely, those on "Diss ses of Women," I cause of Infants" and "Care of the sick."

The first of these is a model of its kind. It is chaste in 1-namage, centains no disgustic gricures for children to happen on and be overcurious about, and taken altogether is the most practical, sen liberand straight-forward treatise upon this delicate subject that has ever been printed.

been printed.

This chapter alone is worth many times the cost of the book to every mother, even if it had to be purchased at its regular price.

The other chapters referred to are equilly well written and valuable.

The Independent Pruggist.

The druggists are getting so wealthy since the influenza came that now the man who wants to decorate his interior with something that tastes particularly bad has to send in his card and wait in the marble hallway, next to the so-da-water fountain, while his pills are being mixed for him by the deputy third assistant chemist, with the aid of a case-knife and a rolling pin. For-merly he was permitted to go back by the base burner and read the wrappers on the proprietary medicine bottles and fondle the tooth-washes on the glass counter while waiting for his or-der to be filled. But that was before the druggists got to be millionaires.

USEFUL INFORMATION.

Tilbury Fox, M. D., the eminent medical writer, in his work "Skin Diseases," thus accounts for the pimples so common to the face and neck. Eating too rich of too greasy cretory organs are sluggish, causes in most people indigestion or a dyspepsial condition, which causes the blood to move sluggishly, and enfeebles the pores. The result is, that the exuding secretions block in the pores, which inflame, each distinct inflammation being a pimple. Dr. Fox therefore does not prescribe "blood purifiers" so called, but a "dyspepsia cure" to be taken, to use his own

"till the dyspepsial symptoms have cared." The old idea was, that faceruptions were caused by a "humor in the blood," for which they treated the blood, blood," for which they treated the blood, giving the mineral, potash. Joy's Vegetable Sarasparilla follows the modern ideas of Dr. Fox, and aims with gentle vegetable alteratives at the stomach and digestive organs. The reason is apparent why it cures dyspepsia and indigestion, and the pimples and skin cruptions which result therefrom and why sarsaparillas that use minerals fall.

ays: On Sunday last the large pump, full for ten years under water at the 14th level, was uncovered and found to be almost in perfect condition. The valves had been set wrong and that no doubt was the immediate cause of no doubt was the immediate cause of the failure of this pump to drain the winze when formerly working. When the pump had been cleaned and the valves set as they were made for work, the compressed air was turned on and pumping commenced with such force that the old pipes leading from the 14th to the 13th level could not carry the values of water sent up, and burst the volume of water sent up, and burst under the pressure. This effect has been remedied, and yesterday morning the water had been lowered to a point fifteen feet below the 14th level. OTHE TIGRESS !

By the Grismer-Davies Excellent Combination

The San Francisco Examiner says The Grismer Company, which harmonized so well with "The Burglar," eemed as much at home in the atmosphere of "The Tigress." There was much good acting done in the performance at the Bush-street Theater last night. The two inportant roles are those of the two women who are pitted against each other from the beginning. In the prologue, one of them (Phebe Davis), a flower girl, is leluded into a mock marriage at Monte Carlo, with a young man who is afterward ruined by the other woman, the adventuress, and who shoots himself when she refuses to marry him. After several years the two women meet again under other circumstances. The flower girl has become a governess in the family of Count Baudry, and the adventuress, who is reigning fashion in Paris, is invited, with her accomplice—who passes as her brother—to visit the Chateau Bandry. The Count loves the governess, and the adventur-ess tries to secure him for herself. The knowledge each woman has of the other's past makes their intercourse a series of duels, in which first one triseries of duels, in which first one tri-umphs and then the other. The end brings the triumph of the one who is worthy of it, of course.

Miss Davis has one of the roles which always fit her like a jersey; that of a woman with a large capacity for loving, hating and suffering intensely, placed in circumstances calculated to give both passion and endur ance unlimited opportunities. She puts all her energy, all of her vitality into it and makes it very much the best part in the play.

Mr. Grismer has not as good an epportunity. He is a sort of Italian Jack Fortinbras, but his character is not as well drawn as that of the superbly conscienceless rascal who coached Lena Despard. His Italian accent and his manner are both ad-peace are all blood relations, as there is no doubt that these endemic complaints are produced by condemination of the blood by the miasmats existent in both air and water in malarious regions. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters expels from the blood the virus with which malaris infects, but it does more than this, it neutralizes the atmospheric and squeous poison and its germs before they have prematurely fructified in the system, and thus assectually protects against it the stere inroads of this diabolic brotherhood of diseases. Thus it is not only a remedy, but also a preventive, prompt in relieving, lasting in effect, perfectly efficient. Nervousness, billousness, dyspepsia and kidney trouble also succumb to it.

Catarrhal Deafness-Hay Fever A

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and systechian tubes. Livery and Feed Stable Microscopic research, however, ha proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby material, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks.

N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an olument; both have been discarded by repulable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of three cents in stamps to pay postage.

CARRYING THEIR YOUNG.

Woodcocks Carry Their Offspring from One Place to Another.

One of the most interesting traits about the woodcock is the fact of its occasionally conveying its young through the air, which is done by only one or two other birds. This is no recent distwo other birds. This is no recent discovery. The fact was known as early as the middle of last century, though tilbert White rightly surmised that those observers were mistaken who fancied the young were conveyed either by or in the bill. It is just as erroneous, however, to substitute the claws, as some have done. The truth is that some have done. The truth is that, when the parent bird wishes to convey her young one from a place of danger to one of safety, the tiny thing is gently pressed between the feet and against the breast, the aid of the bill being resorted to only when the burden has been hastily taken up. In this way the whole of the brood is sometimes removed from one part of a wood to another when the birds have been much disturbed. On this subject there is an interesting note in "Lays of the Deer Forest," by the brothers Staart: "One morning sitting on a gray stone, I saw a dark eye which was fixed upon mine from the bed of leaves before me, when suddenly the little brown head of a young woodcock peeped out from the feathers of the old one's breast, uttering that plaintive cry for which language has no sign. There were two more young woodcocks, and to relieve the anxiety of the madre, I left her. Near the place where I found her there was a soft, green strip, such as woodcocks love. I had no doubt that the family would be there next day; and as I passed near I turned aside to see what they were doing. Upon a dry bank half way down the brae, I almost stumbled over a bird, which rose at my feet; and as it darted through the trees I saw that it had something in its claws, and at the same time I heard the plaintive cry of young woodcocks just under my feet. I looked down-there were two; and I thought a hawk had carried off the third, and perhaps killed the mother. This, however, I found on following the bird, was the old woodcock, which, being flushed again suddenly, after a low flight of only a few yards dropped what it was carrying—her own young woodcock."
This trait may be confirmed by any one who will look out the bird in its haunts, and is all the more interesting as it seems to be an acquired one. The bird is in no way adapted to transport its young through the air.—The Gentle-

AN EDITOR'S TALK.

He Tells What Names Are Popular Among So-Called Literary Women. An Old Editor: I wonder if any voman ever liked her own name? When I was in the harness I used to have to read all the manuscript that came to the office. Most of our contributors were women. Women, I have sometimes thought, are naturally inclined to litera-I never knew one who didn't drift into writing for the press if she had the slightest encouragement. And when they begin to write of course the first thing they do is to select a nom de plume. These assumed names used to amuse me and I took a fancy one day to keep track of them for one year. At the expiration of that time I discovered that the dame "Maude" led the list. The next was "Lillian," and then they scampered off into the realms of fiction.
"Beulah," "Mispah," "Rowena," and the like. Occasionally I found one who wonder whatever became of that long procession of sorrowful-looking creatgreat bundles of manuscript and beof Washoe, State of Nevada, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 1070, for the purchase of the S% of NW¼ and N% of SW¼ of Section No. 8, in Towns' ip No. 15 north, Range No. 17 east, M. At first hearted. For instance, I would ask one: "How many children have you?" If she said more than two I asked their names. Then I would ask the nature of their diseases and she would tell me. I would take the story and label it, "Katie—measles." Then of the next applicant the same query. Then the label, "Johnny—the mumps," and then I would lay the MSS, away in a pigeonhole and occasionally I would look them over and wonder how the invalid corps were progressing. When I felt a little womanish in my heart I would select the "disease" which I thought was most dangerous and use it. And then I used to watch the obituary column. But I never saw the announcement of the death of any of the starving ones whose names were on the parchment in my pigeon-holes.—Chicago Tribune.

DEATH BY DROWNING.

An Author Graphically Describes How It The ship was the Sir George Pollock, Lyttelton, New Zealand. We were about 1,000 miles south of the Cape of Good Hope, a very cold latitude in the month of October. I was a saloon passenger and had been fishing for albatronses and mollymocks over the stern with a long line and hooks baited with salt and the salt and hooks baited with salt and the salt and hooks baited with salt and the salt day we went down to dinner, but I, being anxious to catch a bird, made a hurried meal and hastened back on deck.

About mid-day we went down to dinner, but I, be-The Sir George Pollock was an old-fashioned ship with a high poop, and, as we had cowson board, a number of trusses of hay had been lashed to the stern of hay had been lashed to the stern taffrail, where they were less liable to be wetted by the sea than elsewhere. When I got on the poop, no one else being there but the man at the wheel, I found my line had got entangled with the rudder. I climbed on to one of the trustee of her with the intention of

was a heavy swell, and as I rose to the crest of a waye I saw the ship, locking very small, as if she were already a long way off. I noticed, however, that she was hove to, and I felt sure then that I should be picked up. My only fear was that the albatrosses might sweep down upon me and kill me with their terrible beaks, as they had the carpenter of the same ship the voyage before. A long time passed—hours, it seemed to me and my clothes having become soaked I floated low in the water and could no longer empty my mouth fast enough to get breath or keep the ship in sight. Every wave that came sank me deeper and made me swallow more water. I began to feel deadly cold and I thought it was all over with me. I could not help blaming my friends on the ship for their cruelty in letting me drown, when they might so easily have sent a boat for me, but I forgave them and said my prayers to myself. All I could do now I could not keep my head above water, and at last I saw it green over my eyes as I looked up, my head swam round and I thought I was going to sleep. I was aroused by something touching me, forcing me down in the water, and then dragging me out altogether, and the next thing I knew I was among men who were talking, though I could not understand them for the rushing and whizzing in my ears. The first words I understood were something about "handing me up," and at the same time I felt myself being lifted up the ship's side and seized by a number of arms. Then my clothes seemed to come off all at once—they had been cut off by the doctor with a sharp knife-and then I felt warmth all over me. Soon I knew that I was lying in warm blankets with hot bottles my arm-pits and feet. I could hear voices round me and knew what they said, and I could feel hands rubbing my limbs and turning me about. But I could not speak or move or show any sign of life, and in my inside I still felt so cold I thought I must die. At length I felt something very hot in my mouth, and I gulped and it went down my throat. It came again and again and warmed me and made me feel better, though fearfully sick. Then I felt a terrible pricking and twitching-like "pins and needles" when your foot has gone to sleep-all over me. After that I got drowsy, and the next thing I remember was lying in my own berth with my father and sister sitting by me. I was still very weak and I had a very bad cough, but I was out of danger and fast recovering. Two days later the children in the saloon, who were all great friends of mine, were allowed to come and see me and bring me little presents they had ready for me, and in a fortnight I was up and again catching seabirds over the stern. I had been nearly half an hour in the cold waters of the Southern Ocean, and it was two hours before they could tell for certain whether I was dead or alive.—Edward Wakefield, author of "New Zealand

A MINE OF GARNETS. Extensive Ledges of This Stone Located

Near Fort Wrangell. The extensive garnet ledges at Fort Wrangell are an inexhaustible source of beautiful and ornamental curiosities. The cropping of the ledges is about ten feet wide, standing perpendicularly and running northeast and southwest several miles in length; the depth of it no man has ever found out. The lapidaries, however, have failed to utilize them for any purpose whatver, except as a curio and to demonstrate the certainty of the unerring law of nature which governs every phemenon. Every plane of the polygon is of the same form, every angle is of the same degree, and every gem is the equal and like of its fellow. The mining and the shipment of this rock has become quite a business. It is worth twenty dollars per ton on the wharf at Fort Wrangell, and is shipped to all parts of the country to fill the cabinets of the wealthy and the collections in public institutions.—Detroit Free Press.

Watches in Card Cases.

Among the latest novelties in the way of card cases is a very dainty little one made of very finely dressed leather. In one corner of the case is set a tiny little watch. The effect of this is very pretty, and, besides this, the combina-tion is a very useful one. Ladies are often put to agreat deal of trouble in taking out their watches when on the street. Carrying this little time-piece set in their card case or pocket-book saves them all this trouble, and then, too, Captain Witters, bound from London to Lyttelton, New Zealand. The Banner Had Two Sides.

During the recent military maneuvers in Hanever the German Emperor was highly delighted with the honors show-ered upon him. With the King of Saxony he considered them proof of the complete resignation of the people and their submission to the new order of things. While driving through a small village in the course of his journey to his the rudder. I climbed on to one of the trusses of hay with the intention of casting the line loose, and was leaning down to do so when the ship gave pitch. I lost my balance and fell plump into the sea. From where I was perched on the hay to the water, as the ship rose on the wave, was a clear drop of twenty feet or more, and as I fell flat on my chest the wind was knocked out of me and I was half stunned for the moment.

When I came to myself I was floating pretty comfortably, my thick woolen clothes supporting me, and my wideawake hat floating by my side. There THE MARITAL RELATION.

cerning the Divorce Question. As marriage and the family institution constitute the foundation and chief corner-stone of civil society, it is of the greatest moment that the marriage tie should never be dissolved save for the most urgent reason. I can not assent. however, to the doctrine that it should never be dissolved at all. Mere separation, though legalized, would often be an inadequate and unjust remedy to the injured party, who would thus be subjected to an enforced celibacy. This might suit the notions of those who regard celibacy as a virtue, but would fail to approve itself to those who take a wider and more charitable view of human nature. The Divine law which says: "What God hath joined together let not man put asunder," immediately adds an exception showing-what the law of nature dictates—that the case is not governed by any iron rule of universal application. The law "Thou shalt not kill," has its necessary exceptions, a disregard of which would render it mischievous in a high degree. know no other law on the subject but the moral law, which does not consist in arbitrary enactments and decrees, but is adapted to our condition as human beings. This is so, whether it is conceived of as the will of an All-Wise Creator, or as the voice of humanity, speaking from its experience, its neces sities and its higher instincts. And that law surely does not demand that the injured party to the marriage bond should be forever tied to one who disregards and violates every obligation which it imposes; to one with whom it is impossible to cohabit; to one whose touch is contamination. Nor does it demand that such injured party, if legally free, should be forever debarred from forming other ties through which the lost hopes of happiness for life may be restored. It is not reason, and it can not be law, Divine or moral, that unfaithfulness or willful and obstinate desertion, or persistent cruelty of the stronger party, should afford no ground for relief. The most rigid creeds to the contrary have found methods of dispensation from the theoretical rule. And if no redress be legalized, the law

No jugglery or privacy should be tolerated, nowever high in station the parties may be. Investigation of the truth should be thorough and open, and should be a matter of public concern, participated in by the public representative of the law. It should be regarded as a quasicriminal process, if not accompanied with criminal sanctions. Only serious and even severe methods of administering the law will be kufficient to repress and the Kidneys. Nature has expended much labor on the perspiratory system-has constructed for each of us many miles of tubing and millions of secreting glands, each furnished with its tiny blood-vessel regulated by its microscopic nerve.

ABOUT PERSPIRATION. An Organ of Elimination Like the Lungs

Not only does this system perform an essential service in keeping the bodily that has ever been printed ft is entitled emperature down to the normal point of safety, ninety-eight degrees Fahrenheit, by the evaporation of the perspired fluid, but it is also an organ of elimination like the kidneys and the lungs.

An adult excretes a full pound of sweat daily, and this may be increased to three or four pounds. From this fact may be understood both the danger of suddenly checking the outflow of the poisonous material, and the advantage, when one has taken cold, of the Russian bath. The quantity and character of the fluid render a frequent change of clothing a matter of no small importance.

Some diseases, as acute rheumatism, phthisis, general debility, are accompanied by excessive perspiration, which is also sometimes purposely induced by the use of certain drugs called diaphoretics. As we are all aware, the amount of perspiration is abnormal in hot weather. The heat of a muggy day is aggravated and made more oppressive by the slow evaporation from the surface of the body. The atmosphere is too fully charged with moisture to vaporize the sweat.

Excessive sweating is sometimes par-tial, being limited to the soles, palms, or to one-half of the face, head or body, and that, too, without any discoverable cause. The touching of one side of the tongue with salt will sometimes cause a profuse perspiration upon the corresponding side of the body.

Perspiration may also be deficient. This is generally the case in diseases of the kidneys, in the early stages of fever, and in certain skin diseases. When the sebaceous or 'oil secretion is deficient, there is apt to be a like deficiency in the perspiration, rendering the skin dry and rough.

Perspiration may have an offensive odor, especially that which is secreted by the arm-pits, feet and toes. The sweat and the sebaceous secretion undergo a chemical change into the fat-ty acids, some of which are like those nd in rancid butter. This condition is sometimes due to lowered vitality of the system. The affected parts should be repeatedly washed with tar soap, and the linen frequently changed. The soles of the stockings should be daily disinfected with a saturated solution of boracic acid. Cork soles should be worn in the shoes, and be similarly disin-fected.—Youth's Companion.
